WAITE'S MANIFESTO.

Annual Thanksgiving Effusion of Colorado's Eccentric Chief of the Executive.

He Shows His Belief in Populist Doctrine in a Statement to the Public.

Denver, Col., Nov. 13.—Governor Waite shows his belief in Populist doctrines by issuing the following statement in conjection with his thanksgiving proclamation: "The soil and the bowels of the earth have responded to the energy of man. Art and science have flourished as never before in the history of the world. Wonderful strides have been taken in the knowledge of adapting the materials of nature to the advanced requirements of advanced civilization. Wealth without limit is ready to spring forth under the magic touch of industry, skill and intelligence, but withal, the overshadowing threat to our civilization is the consequent recurrence of commercial and industrial panics which blight the lives and hopes of millions of able bodies and skillful beings. Monopoly-robbery under the form of the law—is the curse of our times, and withers the best physical and mental energies of the people, and while we may be exceedingly thankful for genial climate and unbounded resources, let us bear in mind that only through a conscientious regard for the industrial rights of all the people can the blessings of religious and economic freedom be permanently established."

HORSES CREMATED.

Eleven Valuable Horses Burned Near Ottawa—Loss, $30,000.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—Eleven excellent thoroughbred horses were burned to cinders last night in their stables at Janeville, in the vicinity of Ottawa. The horses belonged to Mrs. P. McGuire, of New York, widow of Philip McGuire, who was to dispose of them by auction in a few days. She was getting rid of the stock gradually by private sale for some time, until these were all that were left. Two of the mares were worth $10,000, and not one of the eleven was worth less than $500, while some were worth three times that amount.

THE PACIFIC METROPOLIS.

Whalers to Try Their Luck in Southern Waters.

San Francisco, Nov. 13.—The whaling barks Belvedere and Cape Horn Pigeon are fitting out for cruises after sperm whales in the south seas. They expect to get away in about ten days. They will be in the Arctic for spring whaling.

Mrs. Mary Barnes, accused with Thos. Salter with attempting to poison her husband, is supplementing her confession. Unable to sleep on Friday night, she arose at midnight, and in the quiet of her cell she wrote until morning, giving a full history of the case, admitting that Barnes was being poisoned by arsenic. She also says that Salter wanted to shoot him, but she would not allow it. This confession is now in the possession of the district attorney. Salter refused to say anything in regard to his connection with the crime or the confessions of Mrs. Barnes.

The Peruvian bark Adalgisa, which put into port in distress a few weeks ago while bound from Callao to Puget sound, was sold yesterday by United States Marshal Shaw, being knocked down to Captain Scadella, who was in command of the bark, for $800. When asked to pay over the money he stated that he had none, and only bid on the vessel in order that she might not be sold at too great a sarifice. The marshal has ordered him into custody for contempt and the vessel will have to be sold over again at an early date.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Meeting of Council—How Bradstreets Give Ratings.

The council of the board of trade met this forenoon, President Flumerfelt in the chair. A good deal of business of a general character was transacted, but most of it was of an unimportant nature.

A letter was read from Agent-General Beeton, accompanying an engraved portrait of the Marquis of Ripon, colonial secretary.

The secretary of the Tacoma chamber of commerce forwarded the report of the harbor master of that port for October, showing amount of exports and inward and outward tonnage and cargo, which was ordered to be acknowledged and the courtesy reciprocated.

George Wilcox & Co., of Sydney, N. S. W., enquired for the names of some of our leading firms who deal in skins, hides and tallow, and the secretary was instructed to reply giving the desired information.

President Flumerfelt brought up what he described as a most serious matter—the rating of the business men of British Columbia by Bradstreets in their semi-annual publication of 1894. The president stated that he knew of several instances where the effect of this unfair and incorrect rating, or rather of the refusal of the agency to rate at all, had been most injurious to the business of the province, and quoted from one letter, written from a wholesale dealer in Montreal, as follows:

"The fact is that the bank at the present time regards British Columbia paper with a good deal of suspicion. I know very well that my sales in British Columbia are perfectly safe, but the bank does not know this, but simply judges from general principles, and they are rushing us for a reduction of our paper from British Columbia."

Mr. Flumerfelt read the notice from Bradstreets explaining the reasons for omitting all ratings of British Columbia firms, which are as follows:

"Notice—The serious and widespread destruction of property by the unprecedented floods in many sections of British Columbia, and particularly along the Fraser river, has so changed the conditions of many merchants as to render an accurate report impossible at the present time. Hence the absence of the names in this volume. Active steps will be taken to revise the district as soon as communication is re-established, and subscribers will be furnished a supplement covering the section at an early date. June, 1894."

The very fact that a commercial agency should deem it proper to omit British Columbia ratings from one of its publications because of a local flood, and thus convey the implication that all of British Columbia was in such a condition that ratings were impossible, was generally condemned by the council, and after full discussion the following resolution was unanimously carried:

"Moved by Hewitt Bostock, seconded by T. S. Futcher, that this board of trade strongly condemns the notice printed in Bradstreets Mercantile Agency of New York semi annual publication of 1894, referring to the effect of the floods on the Fraser river on the credit of merchants throughout the province, as being unfair and misleading, and that the above mentioned company be requested to take immediate steps to alter the same, and the attention of the boards of trade throughout the Dominion be specially drawn to the matter."

The council then adjourned.

EUROPEAN GOSSIP.

Sir Joseph Renals the New Lord Mayor of the Metropolis and His Career.

Prince of Wales' Birthday Celebration Conducted Quietly in His Absence.

London, Nov. 13.—Floods in various parts of England are still raging. The Avon has overflowed its banks at Bath, and thousands of persons are imprisoned in the upper stories of factories and dwellings.

In a proclamation to the people of Finland the Russian emperor says he will maintain the religion and fundamental laws of the country and the rights and privileges of every class.

A dispatch from Dresden says: By the explosion of fire damp in the Pluto colliery at Wiesa yesterday twenty people were killed and many injured.

The czar has appointed the Prince of Wales honorary colonel of the Kieff regiment of dragoons.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Constantinople says that three thousand Armenians, including women and children, are reported to have been massacred in the Sassoun region, near Moosh, Turkish Armenia, during a recent attack by Kurds. Twenty-five villages were destroyed. The Turkish officials declare that the report is untrue and that it grew out of the suppression of a small uprising in the region in question. The British ambassador is making inquiries into the matter.

Flags were flying and bells ringing all over England, Scotland and Wales on Friday in recognition of the 53rd birthday of his royal higness the Prince of Wales. The festivities which were to have taken place at Sandringham House were necessarily abandoned owing to the absence of the Prince of Wales, who for the first time in many years spent his birthday beyond the borders of his own land. Elaborate preparations had been made for a grand ball at Sandringham, the first to be given by the Prince of Wales since the death of his eldest son, the Duke of Clarence, but the death of the czar called the heir to the throne to Livadia where he passed his 53rd birthday amid gloomy surroundings and the grief-stricken relatives of the dead monarch. Upon his return to England, however, he will find that the usual large number of tokens of esteem in the shape of presents received from all parts of the United Kingdom and the different courts of Europe. Before leaving for Russia the Prince and Princess of Wales instructed Col. Knollys, private secretary to his royal higness, that the customary anniversary gifts to the London hospitals and other charities should not be neglected in their absence.

Elaborate ceremonies marked the official opening of the free port of Copenhagen. All the vessels in the harbor were decorated with flags and bunting, and a continual booming of cannon was kept up during the progress of the ceremonies. Addresses were delivered by King Christian, Vice-Admiral N. F. Ravn, minister of the marine, Major-General J. I. Bahnson, minister of war. Tens of thousands of visitors witnessed the exercises. Invitations had been sent to members of all the royal families of Europe, but the death of the czar prevented the majority of these from attending.

Sir Joseph Renals, the new Lord Mayor of London, was born and educated at Nottingham, where for a number of years he was engaged in business with his brother. At the age of 32 he retired and removed to London and in 1888 he was elected alderman. Prior to this he had represented Aldergate in the court of common council. At the time of his election as Lord Mayor he was senior sheriff of London. His election was vigorously opposed by many aldermen on the ground that he was the promoter and director of nine companies having an aggregate of $15,000,000, not one of which was paying dividends. A ballot of the entire guilds electorate was taken and Alderman Renals received a majority of the votes and was declared elected.

THE ROYAL CITY.

Continuation of the Lobb Murder Trial—Other Notes.

New Westminster, B. C., Nov. 13.—The body of an Indian woman was found stowed away in a packing case in the middle of a field near Steveston yesterday. No signs of violence were found on the body but an investigation is to be held. The Indians thereabouts profess ignorance of the woman or anything concerning her.

A band of thirty cattle driven by road all the way from Nicola arrived in the city last night, being thirty days on the road. This is the first lot ever brought clear through on foot.

The Lobb murder trial was resumed this morning, when Mrs. D. W. Gordon of Nanaimo, testified that Mrs. Lobb had told her about a week previous to her death that she felt like committing suicide but assigned no reason. Hodgson also testified that after one of Lobb's big sprees when he had to go to the New Westminster hospital she told him if another trouble of the kind occured she would commit suicide. The case is still progressing, but it is expected to reach the jury to-night.

Whiteway Returned.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 13.—The Whiteeyites by the latest returns will have a majority of two when the next assembly meets and will then oust the Goodridge government.

THE HORSE SHOW.

Annual Exhibition at Madison Square Gardens.

New York, Nov. 12.—Admirers of horseflesh and society people in general turned out in force to-day upon the opening of the annual horse show in Madison Square Garden. The entries exceed those of last year by more than three hundred and there are fifty more exhibitors than in any previous year. The thoroughbred trotting class is especially well represented, among the famous trotters on exhibition being Devil to Pay, Devotee, Chimes and Stamboul. Trotting stallions, four years old and over, include the Dane, Pawnee, King Rene, jr., and Mahogany. Among those in the fancy class with fancy records are Fantasy, Nightingale, Wistful and Miss Alice. There are eleven coaching stallions shown among them being Orloffs, French and German. Among those who have entered their carriage horses in the competition are O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Mitchell Harrison, John A. Logan, jr., Rutherford Stuyvesant, Miss Benedict and W. Seward Webb. The exhibits of trotters and roadsters, hackneys, heavy draught stallions, saddle horses, police horses, hunters and jumpers are unusually large. Great interest is taken in the second competition for the American Hackney Society's Challenge Cup. This competition is open only to stallions that have won prizes in other classes and the cup must be won two years in succession by the same horse before it becomes the property of the owner of the winner. Dr. W. Seward Webb's famous stallion Matchless of Londesborough was the successful animal at the exhibition of last year. The prizes offered by the National Horse Show Association this year aggregate $30,000, of which amount the hackneys secure nearly one-fifth, $6870. The exhibition will continue for one week.

POORLY FED LABORERS.

Men From the American Phosphate Fields Die on Shipboard.

Perth Amboy, N.J., Nov. 12.—The American barkentine Robert S. Patterson, Captain Barton, arrived here late yesterday afternoon and anchored in Staten Island Sound. The master at once came ashore and reported that he needed a physician. The Patterson left the Island of Navassa 15 days ago. She has a cargo of phosphate rock and besides her crew she brings 71 laborers who have been working in the pits of the American Phosphate Company. When she was two days out several of the passengers became sick. Three of them died and were buried at sea, and a fourth was found dead in the hold this morning. His body was on the deck covered with a piece of tarpaulin and his companions were standing around it. When Deputy Health Officer Parker boarded the vessel, assisted by a local physician, he made an examination and it was found that many of the ship's company were suffering from beri-beri. Some of them were past all help. To-day a strict examination will be made, and those not really sick will be allowed to go to Baltimore, where they will receive their wages. They tell stories of suffering at Navassa. They say they had nothing but salt pork to eat with their hard bread. Captain Barton confirms their story and says they had to drink impure water. The men are cooped in between the decks of the barkentine, without light or air, and with no bedding. Some of those who are sick are able to bobble on deck. There are many boys and a few old men in the party. The city authorities will take care of the sick, if necessary, and bury the dead.

ANOTHER ELECTION POSSIBLE.

Democrats to Contest the Constitutionality of the New York Legislature.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Governor Flower, Senator Hill, Senator A. Murphy and several of the local Democratic leaders had a conference at the executive mansion on Sunday, beginning in the afternoon and lasting until night. The subject of their discussion was the point raised by the senators' managers in the late campaign regarding the effect of the revised constitution upon the legislature of 1895. It is settled that the constitutionality of the assembly whose members were elected last Tuesday will be contested in the courts by the Democrats. While no definite programme was agreed upon, a general plan of action, it is said, was formulated. None of the participants in the conference would consent to talk about it, but it was hinted that the right of the new legislature to make laws would be tested very early in the new year. The constitution, which goes into effect January 31st, says the assembly shall consist of 15 members and that there shall be 50 senators. It contains nothing, the Democrats say, that will make it possible for the 128 assemblymen elected this fall and the 32 senators who were elected last fall to perform any of the duties of a legislature next year.

The Dead Czar.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 12.—Owing to the large quantity of floating ice in the Neva the Troitski pontoon bridge has been removed. This has necessitated a change in the route of the procession to-morrow. The body will arrive at Nicolas station, where a short service will be held. The column will traverse the Nevski prospect to St. Isaac's cathedral, where it will stop for a short time while the clergy say prayers and blessings as in Moscow. From St. Isaac's it will proceed through the Senate place, along the English quay, across the Nicolas stone bridges, across the University quay, past the bourse, over the bridge, through the Zoological garden street, along the Alexander prospect and over the Neva Kronversky bridge, entering the fortress by Peter the Great's gate. During the procession mass will be said in the Fortress cathedral, minute guns will be fired and bells will be tolled in the cathedral where the body is to lie. Everything was completed this morning by the court officials.

The catafalque occupies most of the central portion marked by four enormous pillars. Above and supported by the pillars is a lofty canopy surmounted with a golden reproduction of the imperial crown, bearing aloft a high gold cross. Between the crown and each pillar hangs a wide band of brocaded silver cloth lined with ermine. The dais has three steps covered with magenta velvet, on which glitter hundreds of golden eagles. The windows are draped so heavily as to let in only subdued light. Alexander III.'s Russian orders will be placed on cushions at the head of the catafalque, and his foreign orders on cushions at the feet. The grave or tomb opens through the pavement on the left side of the cathedral. It is next to his mother's, just beyond which is his father's tomb. The sides of the open grave have been lined with metal.

Although the czar's funeral is a week off the streets are crowded and strangers are coming to the city by scores with every train. Nearly a thousand wreaths and crosses have been received from princes and members of courts, and fully a thousand more are expected to arrive with the body. The work of draping the city is being pushed rapidly to completion, but all the decorations are made under the management of the police; they are inartistic and monotonous.

LEAVING AMERICA.

Colony of American Negroes to be Established in Liberia.

New York, Nov. 13.—The steamship Kansas City, which arrived here yesterday afternoon from Savannah, Ga. brought among her passengers, twelve negroes old and young of both sexes, the advance guard of a large African colonization scheme, now on foot throughout several southern states. The plan originated early this year in the mind of Bishop Turner, who is now travelling through the south. It was formulated and put in shape by A. J. McMillan, a white man, of Birmingham, Ala., who founded what is known as the International Immigration Society. The plan of the society was not new by any means and this particular scheme had a large following from its inception. The society is now said to number 4000. Yesterday's advance guard were members of a committee appointed by the society to go to Africa and arrange for the reception of a large body of negroes that will soon follow. The President of Liberia, it is said, has promised the colonists land and farming implements. It is asserted that 4000 southern negroes are now congregated in New Orleans, Mobile, Savannah and Charleston, ready to start as soon as the committee gives the word. The first big lot, numbering 500, will leave this port early next month. The Liberian congress will welcome them and President Cheeseboro has written letters to the promoters of the scheme, urging negroes to come. The advance guard is in charge of D. L. Johnson, an intelligent negro, of Hot Springs, Ark. Johnson's wife and four children accompany him. The other members of the party are Lafayette Woodall, wife and two children, John Hines and Shadwick Smith, of Pine Bluff, Ark. The women in the party appeared to be much pleased at the prospect. "You see," explained Johnson, "the negroes of the south have about arrived at the conclusion that the race prejudice against them is increasing rather than diminishing. This feeling is bitter in Arkansas. Outrages are frequent and there seems to be no way to secure redress. Courts and juries alike are against us and in some sections negroes are never safe for a moment. It is our intention to found a settlement. We will build a town and expect in a few years to become a flourishing community. The society has arranged for transportation so that it will only cost each colonist $41 to go from any southern point to Liberia. We don't want idlers and no accounts with us. We expect that each Colonist will have about $200 in gold when he leaves this country. I should not be surprised to see 10,000 negroes leave the south within a year. The Liberian climate is mild and delightful. Colonists are sure to get along if they will work." Johnson and his party will proceed to Monrovia, the Liberian capital via Liverpool.

SINGLE TAX EXPERIMENT.

A Trial to be Made in Florida by ex-Pullman Employes.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 12.—A party of Pullman employes and their families, numbering in all five hundred persons, will arrive in Alabama this week, and will start a single tax colony after the ideas of Henry George, near Blakeley, in Baldwin county. They have secured two thousand acres of fine land at $10, on the very spot where the last battle of the civil war was fought. The land lies for two and a half miles along the beautiful Tensaw river. A saw mill and brick making machinery have been bought on time, and it is believed here that the co-operative colony will prove a success.

Little Beginnings.

The steam which raised the lid of the kettle led a philosophic mind to utilize it for man's benefit. No one dreamed that we should now be dragged along by it at the rate of sixty miles an hour. When Perry Davis made a preparation for the medicinal use of his family, over fifty years ago, neither he nor any man imagined that it would now be sold in every land, and prove to be the PAIN KILLER of the world. The big new bottle, old price 25c.

Condensed Dispatches.

Geo. Weston, a balloonist, was mobbed at Cedar Park, Cala., for refusing to go up in his balloon and come down with a parachute, as he had advertised. The balloon was also badly slashed with pocket knives by the outraged crowd.

Heavy rains in several districts in Britain caused severe floods; no lives lost.

There is considerable gossip in Washington in connection with the reported contemplated bond issue. Assistant Secretary Curtis is in New York and his absence lends color to the positive New York statements that the bond issue will be made shortly.

A telegram was received at San Francisco from London to-day announcing the death in that city, at the age of 36 years, of Mrs. Abraham Halsey, wife of the well known mining man, and noted for her numerous charities in San Francisco. In accordance with her wishes, Mrs. Halsey's remains will be cremated and her ashes brought to San Francisco.

M. E. Barnett, a retired merchant of Los Angeles, Cal., a guest at the Vanderbilt hotel, was found dead in bed this morning. The police were inclined at first to believe that the man's death was suicidal, but investigation indicates that death is due to natural causes. Deceased was 67 years old and was known to have been in feeble health.

NEWS OF THE INTERIOR

Suicide at Kamloops—Coal and Gold Mining Enterprises in Yale District.

Prospector Powers' Body Found in Kicking Horse River—Railway Accident.

Kamloops Sentinel.

On Saturday evening Mr. W. L. Hogg, secretary of the Stevenson Gold and Platinum Hydraulic company, returned from Granite creek. Mr. J. B. Carrington, of Nicola lake, drove him in. Mayor Lee, who went down to lay out the ditch for this company, has completed his work, and came back as far as Nicola lake, where he has some work to do. While at Granite creek Mr. Hogg staked another claim on the benches above the Tullameen, which are suitable for hydraulicing. He had this claim also surveyed, and will proceed to organize a company to develop it. About three miles of ditch will be required to get water on, but the supply will be ample. Work on the ditches has already begun on the Stevenson property. While taking in the horses one of them broke a leg and had to be shot.

The Gott Bros., who staken coal lands on the North Thompson a few weeks ago, are looking to the development of the find as soon as possible. They returned home to Lillooet a fortnight ago, and there met Mr. R. L. Clarke, of Montreal, who is in the province inquiring into the value of some claims in the interest of financial men of that city. They arranged with Mr. Clarke to visit these coal measures, and arrived in Kamloops with him on Friday morning last. On Saturday morning they left for the North Thompson, expecting to return to-morrow. Mr. Clarke says that the attention of capitalists in Montreal has been directed to British Columbia mining enterprises by the success of the Horsefly and South Forks companies, and he has come out to make inquiries regarding certain properties to develop which assistance is wanted. He has been through Cariboo and Lillooet. Should the indications convince him that there is a reasonable certainty of a vein of good coal, large enough to be worked profitably, on the Gott creek land, he anticipates that men can easily be found to take hold of the locations and develop them.

A sad case of suicide occurred some time on Thursday in a small building at the rear of Mr. E. Austin's new house at the corner of Victoria street and Fourth avenue. In this building John Ericson and Eugene Quevilon sleep. On returning home on Thursday night they found the door locked. They sought Night Officer Blair, who managed to open the door, when he was horrified to find the body of a man with a rope about his neck hanging near one of the walls, the feet touching the floor and the face downward. The cord used was a small one and seemed scarcely sufficient to bear the weight of the body. The man had made a slip knot and put the noose about his neck and then fastened the other end to a shelf. As this could easily be done while standing on the floor, the deceased must have thrown himself forward, when the rope tightening choked him to death. Mr. Blair locked the door little further. Officer Blair related the and notified the coroner. The inquest which was held this morning revealed particulars of finding the remains; Mr. F. B. Fabian stated that the deceased had come to him several times for work within the past eight weeks, but he could not give him any until Wednesday, when he worked from 8 o'clock. The deceased said he had a wife and family in Calgary. Rev. A. Lee related how the man had come to his house, stating that he was sick and wanted to get back to Calgary. He took him to Dr. Furrer's office, and on the way the man talked of killing himself, but he tried to cheer him up. He also said he was troubled about his sins. He said he had $1, and Mr. Lee gave him 5 cents more. Mr. Lee had another talk with him later, when deceased talked about religion. John Ericson and Eugene Quevillon, who occupied the cabin, testified to knowing him for a few days, but did not know where he came from. He slept in that cabin on Tuesday night, but had not been seen on Wednesday night. Among the personal effects of the deceased were letters howing his name to be Albin Kihlgren, one of these was a child's scribbling "to papa."

Golden Era

The body of old Powers who disappeared mysteriously last August, was accidentally found by a Chinaman on Thursday afternoon down on the bank of the Kicking Horse. The supposition is that Powers fell into the river while in a state of intoxication and drowned. The deceased was an old timer and well known in the district. The remains were identified and interred in the cemetery Friday morning.

On Friday morning between two and three o'clock a westbound freight, Conductor Adair in charge, Engineer Carey with engine 406, ran into a mud slide three miles east of Golden. The engine and a couple of cars were ditched and the draw heads on all the cars were smashed. A poor unfortunate tramp who was on the train beating his way along the road was crushed to death between two cars, the train boys fortunately escaping unhurt. Coroner Manuel had the remains of the victim of the accident conveyed to Golden where they were interred in the cemetery. The accident caused the delay of No. 1 for a few hours.

Mr. Frank Pitt met with a rather painful accident on Wednesday last. He, with a few section men, were coming around one of the numerous curves in the canyon on a hand car when they met the work train, engine 39. The work train was running rather faster than usual, with the caboose ahead, as they were in a hurry to get up the canyon with a load and come back and side-track for No. 2. Before the boys on the hand car could get her off the track, the caboose of the work train came into them, smashing the hand car and also striking Frank Pitt who was just about to jump clear. Frank had his left arm broken and he was badly bruised in other places. Dr. Taylor was immediately called and made the patient as comfortable as possible. He was taken to the Medicine Hat hospital on Thursday.

The E. K. E. Company have again rented their placer grounds to a Chinese company for the next season at $2500. This is considered a good figure.

James Dibble has purchased Hank Eller's interest in the "Last Chance" for a good round sum. This is the second sale of mining ground in this locality recently.

Revelstoke Mail.

The four-horse stage from Northport to Le Roi mine made its first trip last week, returning to connect with the Spokane and Northern train. Actual surveys show that the length of the road is just 14 1-3 miles. It has been variously reported all the way from 15 to 20 miles. It is a good road and the stage will be operated regularly hereafter, connecting with all trains, twice a week.

This road runs through United States territory and British Columbia, the men employed being paid by the government of each country. On the American side the rate of wages was $1.50 a day and on the British side $2.50, which is the fixed rate of pay on the government trail and road work, except in places where supplies have to be packed a long distance, in which case the pay is $3 a day. This does not look very much as if the charge brought by Washington newspapers, that wages in British Columbia are Chinaman's wages and do not average more than 75 cents a day, could be substantiated. The boot is on the other foot. It only shows the ridiculous lengths to which the Republican protection papers will go in their desire to scare people from free trade.

An old miner named John Ridgeway met his death at Fort Steele, B. C. He was working on his claim at the Moyea river, drifting, when a "run" took place in the gravel overhead and he was caught and instantly buried under tons of gravel. Every effort was made to rescue him but without avail. His body was found eight days afterwards much bruised. Death had been instantaneous.

On the Mountain Top.

Weary and Jaded Seekers Attain the Coveted Position.

After Months and Years of Suffering Joy Takes the Place of Sorrow.

Paine's Celery Compound Leads to the Summit of Health.

What a joy and satisfaction is experienced when weary and jaded travellers reach the peak of some mighty mountain range. Often such achievements are won after many privations and sufferings. Once the snow-clad and cloud-enveloped summit is attained, past reverses and failures are forgotten; the heart is filled with joy and gladness and a profound satisfaction is experienced as a consequence of victory.

So it is with every human being who has reached the mountain top of vigorous health and strength through the aid of that wondrous medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. There is an intense joy and a feeling of happiness for victory secured after months and years of failures with agencies that promised help but resulted only in deception.

The direct cause of failures in the past to reach the elevated heights of health is entirely due to the use of worthless medicine.

Mark well the successes and victories of those who, in times of weakness, helplessness and suffering, were led, guided and sustained by that health-giver, Paine's Celery Compound.

The common nostrums of our times are unable to cope with neuralgia, rheumatism, heart disease, nervousness, insomnia, dyspepsia, liver and kidney troubles. They may kindle in the breast a false hope for a time, and for a few days give a small measure of relief, but invariably the frail cord snaps, and the victims are hurled into more dreadful dangers and sufferings, and often to death.

How vastly different is the experience of those who take Paine's Celery Compound as their strong leader, guide and protector. They are led surely and steadily onward and upward until the summit of perfect health is reached.

The experience of Mr. William Conley, farmer and hide merchant of West Bolton, P. Q., will fully illustrate the lesson we wish to impress on readers of this paper. It proves fully the great value of Paine's Celery Compound; and shows the folly of wasting time and money on medicines that have no curing merits to recommend them.

Mr. Conley writes as follows:—

"I have had several attacks of neuralgia. It kept on increasing—getting worse; and I tried all the doctors for help, and took all kinds of medicine, and I got so at last that I could not sleep at nights. I was sent to George W. Gilmour's for medicine and I got a prescription of quinine and other mixture of drugs, which I took, but they produced no good. I saw an advertisement of Paine's Celery Compound, and I went and bought a bottle, and it cured me of all pains, and I can now rest as well as ever before. I would not be without it if I had to pay $15 a bottle."

KIND MRS. GLADSTONE.

The Ex-Leader's Wife in the Role of Fairy Godmother.

A pretty story of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone's kindness to a young woman is thus reported by a lady correspondent of the Liverpool Echo. The young woman was the daughter of a music teacher who many years ago was engaged to teach Mr. Gladstone's children. This young woman was anxious to enter the musical profession. In some way, says the correspondent, she became known to Mrs. Gladstone—perhaps through her daughters, the young girl's fellow pupils —and that lady, after hearing her sing, showed her recognition of the ability she displayed in many ways, especially by inviting her to her house that others might hear and admire her also. At last the music master proposed giving a concert, at which his best pupils were to perform. Of course Miss —— was among them, and very much excited she felt at the prospect of making her debut before the very select audience which was secured for the performance, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, of course, conspicuous among its members. She was not afraid of the ordeal, being modestly confident of her ability to pass it with credit to herself and master; but she was a woman, and a very young and rather pretty one, and so it damped her anticipations of coming triumph to look at her old, shabby evening dress, the only one she possessed, and think of appearing in it before the brilliant audience among her well dressed fellow pupils. In vain did her mother remind her of the admiration her superior singing would excite; she felt that a new evening gown, smart and pretty, would effect far more wonderful results than any effort of her own; and so, in rather disconsolate mood, she practiced away, and awaited the eventful hour.

One day, to her surprise, she received an invitation to dine with the Gladstones on the evening of the concert, and drive with them to the hall. Very gladly she accepted it, and thought how good it was of them to let her make her debut, as it were, under their wing, besides saving the expense of a cab. So, though still in rueful contemplation of her toilet, she felt a little better, and in due time arrived at the hospitable door. There she was shown into a bedroom and smilingly told that whatever she found laid out was for her use as she saw fit. Surely the days of fairy-godmothers are not over; for on the bed, spread out in dazzling whiteness, reposed a marvel of muslin, ribbon and lace, a charming evening gown fresh from the modiste, and simple and pure as any "sweet girl graduate" might wish to wear at her first appearance in public. There was no doubt about it, it was really for her—this thoughtfully arranged gift of the kind lady, whose motherly heart had silently understood what the feelings of the girl under such circumstances would be. So, very happily and gracefully, the pretty gift was donned, and the blushing recipient hastened down to join the family, whose venerated head was quite as much interested in the little surprise as any one else concerned.—Pall Mall Gazette.

"THESE AND OTHER EXPENDITURES."

The "speech from the throne" informs the members of the legislative assembly that:

"The moneys required were raised, with the advice of my ministers, by special warrant, and you are called together at an earlier date than is usual, in order that you may ratify these and other expenditures demanded in the public service, and also to consider an act for raising a loan to meet and be devoted to works of public utility."

The expenditures referred to as "these" were occasioned by the floods; what the "other expenditures" were has not yet been stated, but it may safely be assumed that they were either directly or indirectly connected with the elections. It may be very hard to ascertain just what proportion of them was used in the manufacture of political capital for the government.

The people are so far left to surmise the extent of the loan indicated in the paragraph. It is said a million dollars will be proposed, and there is too much reason to believe that this estimate is correct. Another $30,000 will thus be added to the annual interest payment, and the taxpayers may feel happy if they escape another turn of the screw. Presently we shall be told, as in the case of the recent Dominion loan, that there was no trouble in borrowing the money, that the London capitalists were almost falling over each other to bid on British Columbia stock, and then long yarns will be spun concerning the province's high credit. So long as we can borrow money, and then borrow more money to pay the interest, what financial care need we have?

With an unusual display of promptitude the public accounts for the past year were laid on the table immediately after the speech had been read, and a glance at the results shown therein furnishes one with a graphic commentary on the paragraph we have quoted from the speech. The receipts of revenue for the year 1893-94 were $821,660, including interest from sinking funds. The net expenditure, after deducting sinking fund payments, is set down at $1,514,405. This leaves an adverse balance of $692,745, which had to be made up in some way. From the finance minister's statement it is hard to tell where the money was found, but all the available funds, even to the new parliament buildings loan, seem to have been drawn upon for general purposes. Now if we turn to the estimates that were submitted for the year 1893-94 we find that the finance minister expected to receive in that year a revenue from ordinary sources of $1,058,691, or $237,031 more than was actually received. He also expected to have the sum of $500,000 left over from June 30, 1893, but this sum seems to have evaporated, since it is not even mentioned in the accounts now submitted. All that appears in the shape of loan money is the $523,000 raised for the new buildings. The revenue receipts for 1892-93 were $1,019,206, and when the actual receipts for last year are compared with that sum and with Hon. Mr. Turner's estimates it does not appear surprising that the government should put a reference to "hard times" in the "speech from the throne." There would have been "hard times" indeed if the government had not been able to draw upon the $523,000 raised for the special purpose of the new buildings, and there would be harder times still if it could not find authority to raise another loan. The people must feel highly pleased to know that while times were bad the financial carnival was going merrily on, and the government and their favorites were dancing to the music for which taxpayers must pay dearly. Perhaps in time they will come to a full appreciation of the hypocrisy of Davieism.

THE PERFIDY OF SIR HIBBERT TUPPER.

"Driven from the civilized markets of the world, steadily and every year finding their output to those markets decreasing, they spend millions on their navy and millions on their army, to force their wares, and their goods, and their merchandise, into the uncivilized markets of the world."

To the Editor: The strong anti-British sentiment and ill concealed hatred of British principles so brutally expressed in the above slander would naturally lead us to ascribe its origin to ruffians of the O'Donovan Rossa stamp; and we would certainly be justified in considering the man who could so violently slander the British nation one of the bitterest enemies of the old country. But the defamer is neither an escaped convict nor a ticket-of-leave-man—he is none other than Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, minister of marine and fisheries in the Canadian cabinet, and the above extract is taken from a speech delivered by him in the house of commons during the last session of parliament. In his feverish desire to curry favor with his masters, the monopolists, Sir Hibbert, while viciously assailing the free trade policy of the mother country, deliberately insulted the great and generous nation that has bestowed such high honors upon himself and his father. Neither the miserable exigencies of party nor the heat and excitement of debate can excuse or pardon such perfidy. It would, indeed, be difficult to produce a similar exhibition of ingratitude and baseness—such instances of the depravity of the human heart being exceedingly rare. Fortunately there were present those to whom British traditions are sacred and British progress is a source of admiration, and the insult was not permitted to pass without rebuke. Mr. Laurier sprang to his feet and protested against the statement in the following scornful language:

"Sir, I never yet heard the fair name of that great nation so slandered and insulted. At least I never heard the name of England so insulted by a man of English blood. The charge was not new to me; I had read it in the pages of continental pamphleteers; but I am sure we were not prepared to hear it from the mouth of a man of English blood."

We would not have recalled this disgraceful incident—contenting ourselves with the reflection that the slander has not been recorded in the journals of the house unaccompanied by the rebuke administered by the Liberal leader—were it not for the astounding fact that Sir Hibbert adheres to his statement. He is at present in Nova Scotia appealing to the electors with the Old Flag in one hand and his scrap book in the other, and closing his meetings by singing "God Save the Queen." The Halifax Chronicle, in contrasting his disloyal utterances in the house with his effusive professions of loyalty on the stump, demanded a retraction of the slander. But instead of retracting, Sir Hibbert repeats it and endeavors to justify his statement by copious extracts from the inevitable scrap book. He attempts to show that the greatest civilizing and colonizing influence the world has ever seen is neither more nor less than wholesale confiscation and murder, for which the policy of free trade is responsible.

The policy of free trade was not introduced until 1846; therefore every brilliant achievement which has shed additional lustre on the martial splendor of Britain since 1846 has been—according to Sir Hibbert's scrap book—simply a filibustering expedition undertaken with a desire to force British wares abroad. The spirit which animated the immortal charge of Balaklava was merely a desire to force British cottons and cutlery into Russia:

We sabred their gunners, broke column and square,
Charged right through their calvary posted in rear,
When Cardigan, waving his plume, cried "Well done!
"We're too few to hold what we've conquered and won.
"Charge through back again, deal out death with each blade,
"That Russia may tell of the British brigade,
"That Russia may tell of the British brigade."

Was this a filibustering expedition? The glorious deeds which illuminate the horros of the mutiny with bright and brilliant flashes of heroism; the historic march upon Lucknow and the harrowing sufferings of the besieged garrison; the avenging of the atrocities of Cawnpore, of Delhi, and dealing out death to the black devils who violated British women and bayoneted British children were all endured and undertaken not to uphold British honor and British prestige and avenge British wrongs, but, according to Sir Hibbert's scrap book, to force British manufactures into India—was, in fact, according to the same authority, wholesale murder and confiscation. The Ashantee expedition had the same object in view. The march on Abyssinia was not undertaken to snatch a British subject from the dungeons of Magdala. It was, according to Sir Hibbert's scrap book, a filibustering expedition to force British goods upon the natives. Senator Frye, of Maine, a notorious Anglophobe, has a different opinion. In addressing his constituents recently he dwelt eloquently upon the Abyssinian affair, pointing out that England had spent twenty millions to rescue one of her subjects imprisoned in the heights of Magdala, and concluded his peroration with "there is a country one could be proud to die for." Then again we see Colonel Wolseley with his little "thin red streak" winding around the lakes in the direction of Fort Garry. If this expedition was undertaken to force British wares into Canada the government of which Sir Hibbert is a shining light has destroyed its efficacy by imposing a 35 per cent. tariff against their importation.

Let us glance at every engagement, large or small, in which British valor has figured since 1846. We have swept from the snow-covered trenches of the Crimea to the malarious jungles of India; from where the Indian sun tips the gold-crowned mosques of Delhi and Benares to where that same sun sinks to rest in the virgin prairies of Canada. Back again to the Ganges, up through the Peshawur, through the awful Kyber to the base of the Himalayas and let us ask Sir Hibbert if brave Fred Roberts' brilliant march was undertaken to force a box of Beecham's Pills upon the Mullah and a packet of Epps upon Dost Mahommed, or was it to avenge the cowardly murder of Louis Cavagnari and Mr. Hamilton? Let us now "trek" to South Africa and see how far Sir Hibbert's scrap-book agrees with the facts. Was that indomitable spirit displayed by two British subs—Bromhead and Chard—with a handful of raw lads in holding 5000 Zulus at bay at Rork's Drift animated by a desire to compel the savage to wear British shirts, or by the thought that they were Englishmen ready to die in the defense of a British colony? Clustered together behind a pile of biscuit boxes and meat tins, one hundred and forty British youngsters checked the mad and murderous career of five thousand yelling savages who knew no fear. Was this a filibustering expedition? Was Charley Beresford's dash with the Condor under the forts of Alexandria undertaken with a view of selling a top hat to Arabi Pasha? Was Sir Gerald Graham's terrible march to Abu Klea, where the square was broken and the detachment was barely saved from annihilation by the gallant 42nd, the Black Watch, jumping into the breach, was this undertaken to sell a pair of stockings to the Mahdi? Was Tel-el-Kebir fought and won merely to sell an umbrella to Osman Digna? Did Beresford and Sir Charles Wilson dash up to the walls of Khartoum to force a Sheffield razor upon an Arab sheik? Did brave Fred Burnaby yield up his life to sell a cake of Pear's soap to Zebehr's son? or were those splendid deeds and gallant sacrifices accomplished to rescue an English gentleman—a British soldier—the most glorious spirit in Christendom—Chinese Gordon—from the miserable captivity and death to which the mawkish, shocking, vacillating, drifting policy of Gladstone had abandoned him? Then more recently we see Major Wilson and his immortal 39 'treking' out to capture Lobengula. They vanish in the bush. That was the last seen of them alive. They died as only Englishmen can die fighting to the last then covering the faces sang God Save the Queen and received the assegai straight in the breast.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, freshly decorated with imperial honors, the gift of Britain's queen, slanders the British nation by declaring that these glorious exploits were undertaken merely to force British wares into uncivilized countries. Englishmen tell him he lies.

THE MORALITY QUESTION.

To the Editor:—"Desperate cases require desperate treatment," and if the powers that are supposed to be, are not held responsible, who is? It does seem scandulous, after the representations made at the meeting on the subject, to allow this nefarious business to flourish with impunity, as it seems to be doing here in Victoria; under the very nose of the police, and in defiance of all laws of decency and morality. I don't quite see how the remedy would be worse than the disease in this case, and would suggest that the owners of the houses and frequenters be summoned instead of the unfortunate women. It is absurd to presume the owners have no knowledge of the characters of their tenants, and no doubt a heavy fine would prove effectual in checking the letting of houses in respectable localities to women of this class. No doubt the social evil has been and will be a vexed question in most cities, but when it begins to menace respectability, and what is far worse, to infect the rising generation as it does here, I think it is high time to cry stop!

NANAIMO NEWS.

Alexander Meyer, the Pioneer Merchant, Dead.

Nanaimo, Nov. 13.—The by-law for raising a loan of $10,500 to fill in the Commercial street ravine, was submitted to the ratepayers yesterday and carried by 133 majority. The work will be done by the New Vancouver Coal Company and the general belief is that it will be done in a manner that will satisfy every reasonable ratepayer.

The 35th anniversary of the Wallace street Methodist church was celebrated last evening by a tea and concert. Rev. S. Cleaver of Victoria delivered an address, and the remainder of the evening was occupied with a programme of vocal and instrumental music.

The well known pioneer, Alexander Meyer, aged 81, passed away at his residence on Wallace and Fitzwilliam streets on Sunday evening. The body will be taken to Portland, Oregon, for interment.

The Rowlands Concert Company did not give their concert last evening as owing to many counter attractions they got no house.

A debate on "Women's Suffrage" was the subject at St. Alban's entertainment last evening, and will be continued for a few weeks.

P. Woodburn was slightly hurt at No. 5 shaft yesterday by a fall of coal.

A collection of $200 was raised at the pay office on Saturday among the miners in aid of Alphonso a Northfield miner.

THE HOSPITAL BOARD.

Plans for the Maternity School Sent in by Dr. Helmcken.

The Board of Directors of Jubilee Hospital were in session for half an hour last evening. President Joshua Davies was in the chair and the members present were G. H. Brown, Charles Hayward, J. L. Crimp, Thomas Shotbolt, A. Wilson, W. H. Ellis, J. Stuart Yates, and Secretary Harry Yates. Hon. Col. Baker, provincial secretary, wrote saying the old men now in the hospital and not fit subjects for the same would be moved to the Old Men's Home at Kamloops on its completion, which will be at an early date.

Dr. Richardson, surgeon of the hospital, reported that the maintenance of patients during October cost $119 per diem. The doctor asked for some medical supplies. The report was adopted.

The matron acknowledged donations of reading matter from the J.B.A.A., and the R.M.A. club, and clothing from Dr. Hasell. She also added that donations of clothing, particularly warm underclothing, would be welcome. The steward reported donations of chicken feed from Hall, Ross & Co., and flowers from J. S. Helmcken and Miss Deans.

A set of plans and the following letter was sent in by Dr. J. S. Helmcken:

Gentlemen:—Having in previous letters asserted that a building suitable for a maternity school, containing three bedrooms, other rooms and necessary accompaniments, could be built and finished, heated by hot water furnace, hot and cold water supplied the baths and annex and all the rooms, for $3,500. I now forward a plan to prove my assertions. The plans and estimates explain themselves. I feel that this building and patients can be managed by two nurses, but better with a junior one likewise. For a considerable portion of the year the heating apparatus will not be required.

(Sd.) J. S. HELMCKEN.

The letter was referred to the special committee and the meeting adjourned.

Law Intelligence.

The mechanic's lien action brought by the Albion Iron Works' Company against Eli Beam and the A.O.U.W. Building Association came up before Mr. Justice Crease this morning. Ward (Davie, Pooley & Luxton) appeared for the plaintiffs and George E. Powell for the A.O.U.W. The plaintiffs supplied Beam with materials used in the constructing the A.O.U.W. hall to the value of $286.80, and as Beam on the 28th of August gave up the contract and failed to pay them they filed a lien against the land. The defendants set up that Beam was paid in full by them and besides take several objections to the lien as filed. His lordship reserved judgment.

—Further particulars are given of the wreck of the Crown of England in the following dispatch from San Monica, California: "The boat was under command of Captain Hamilton, and left San Diego in ballast for Nanaimo, B.C., at 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning. The fog at that time was so dense that the pilot advised Captain Hamilton not to go. The fog continued all day and night. Without warning the boat struck on a reef in two fathoms of water. The sailors think it was off the south shore of Santa Rosa island. Persons here familiar with the islands think it must have been one of the Anacahas, which are small, rocky, uninhabited islands south of Santa Cruz island. When the boat struck the fog was so dense that the shore was invisible. Sailor Frandberg swam ashore with a life line and proved that the boat was only a few yards from the shore. There was no wind at the time the boat struck, but the breakers were heavy. The steamer went head on and drifted broadside. Her engines were thrown out of place and her rudder carried away and her bottom stove in. No lives were lost.

In the Babmipton series the captain made some statements as to the habits of certain big game which were disputed by other authorities, and it was largely to settle the matter that the trip was taken. The bazaar proper was thrown open this afternoon and is very well patronized. The booths look very attractive with their decorations and pretty wares. The hall has been decorated with flags and evergreens, and looks very attractive. The different departments are in the hands of active, hard-working committees of ladies of the congregation. There will be high tea this evening, and later a concert. The programme for the latter is going to be an attractive one.

—The sale of seats for the performance of the Victoria amateur minstrels has been very good, and although the box sheet was only opened at 9 o'clock this morning a large number of seats have been reserved. Holders of tickets should lose no time in reserving their seats, as everybody wants to go and the capacity of the theatre is limited. Every department of the show is making good progress. There was a rehearsal of the cake walk last night, and it is going to be a hit. George E. Powell will forget law and politics for a while and assume the role of "Ferdy," a tough coon barber in the cake walk. If you miss your Thanksgiving turkey do not fail to see him. —The steamer City of Kingston arrived here at 5:30 o'clock last evening and is alongside of the Costa Rica at Spratt's wharf. She is to be repaired by the Albion Iron Works, the damages sustained in the collision on Saturday with the Mary Perley requiring immediate attention. —W. G. Pinder, C. E., and party, who for five months have been engaged in a survey of the route of the proposed extension of the E. and N. railway from Wellington to Union, have returned to the city. Nothing has been made public but it is understood that considerable work was accomplished, and that the route is an easy one in ever respect with few grades. The distance between the two towns is 55 miles and the country through which the line would run if extended is a very good one. The plans of the Dunsmuirs with respect to it are not known but there are some people who connect the visit of Joseph Hunter, M. P. P., to Ottawa with it.

—The redemption of View street began this afternoon and by December 2 every house on it devoted to immoral purposes will be vacant. Chief Sheppard has decided to clear the entire street. This means that houses outside of which would very likely be interpreted as the "immediate vicinity" of the Catholic cathedral are included in the order, but the chief in his reasoning on the matter includes the complaint of John Jessop, and further believes that it would be unjust to move one house and leave the next one alone. He does not know where he can justly draw the line. He is making the circuit of the houses this afternoon, and ordering the women to vacate the street and seek new quarters by December 1. Where they will go to now nobody seems to know, but it is regarded as probable that everybody will move without offering any resistance.

—The programme for the grand costume concert "Meeting of the Nations," has been completed and will afford splendid entertainment for those who are present at the A. O. U. W. hall to-morrow evening. The concert is in aid of the Roman Catholic and Protestant orphans' homes, two of the most worthy institutions in the city. W. Edgar Buck is the director and Emil Pferdner the orchestra leader. The programme follows:

Germany—"Die Wacht am Rhein," Fraulein von Germania, with chorus.
Spain—"O Mio Fernando," Donna Favorita. "National Air."
Canda—"The Maple Leaf," Miss Columbia, with chorus.

United States—"The Star Spangled Banner," Miss Liberty with chorus.

ADVERTISING THE CITY.

A Committee of the Board of Trade Consider the Question.

Immediately after the meeting of the council of the board of trade this forenoon, the committee of the board on advertising held a session, Mr. T. B. Hall in the chair. The object—to advertise Victoria abroad in such a manner as to have the effect of attracting visitors, capitalists and residents—was informally discussed, a great divergence of views being elicited. Several members of the board favored the circulation abroad of illustrated pamphlets and maps, while others thought the plan adopted by the C. P. R. and other great railways, of displaying in prominent places large photographic views would be the most successful. One or two, whose ideas seemed to be approved of by all, suggested that the best way to advertise Victoria was to let Victoria advertise herself, that is, to make Victoria so attractive that visitors would go away and praise the city as a healthful, clean, well governed and delightful city to live in. To this end, it was shown that the city sewerage system should be completed, the business streets paved, all the streets cleaned, and private as well as public provements encouraged. A suggestion that, to help in this work, a citizens' association, organized on a broad platform and having in view only the improvement of Victoria, was well received, and it is not improbable that steps will be taken to form an organization of this kind. The committee adjourned without taking definite action on the business on hand.

Some of the Tory Variety That Have Not Turned Out as Predicted.

Postponement by Commission—Sir Adolph and the Post-office Clerks.

From our own correspondent.

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—When the McKinley Act was passed the members of the government held that it was a blessing in disguise. It was going to show Canada that she could get along better without the trade of the United States than with it. All the farmers had to do was to raise horses for the British market and good two-rowed barley which was in general demand in the mother country. The government imported the two-rowed barley. It was distributed principally to the Conservatives. Everywhere the new grain was declared to be a success. It was called "Tory" barley, and the Canadian product was stigmatized as the "Grit" article. In this way did members on the government side of the house speak of it, while the Hon. John Carling sang the praises of the two-rowed all over the Dominion. But we hear no more of the two-rowed barley and the Tory farmers who were humbugged with it do not abuse their Grit neighbors for standing by the Canadian product which has proved to be best suited to the Canadian climate.

The trade in horses with Britain never came to anything. Those who talked glibly of such a trade did not count the cost and the time that it would take first to import from Britain and afterwards to raise the foals and keep them until they were saleable. Fortunately for the farmers, before all this could be done the McKinley tariff has been removed and now it is possible to get a fair price for horses as well as barley in the American market.

When the foolish and careless way in which the quarantine regulations were being enforced in this country stopped the shipment of live cattle into Britain and placed Canada like the United States upon the scheduled list, the cry went forth that this was another blessing in disguise. It was to have the effect of starting up slaughter houses at Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal. Indeed, it seemed strange, so we were told, that the Canadian farmer did not see long ago that there was more money in shipping dead meat than live stock.

The French treaty threatens to close up the wine industry in Western Ontario. The Dominion analyst, who has no pretensions to know anything about trade beyond being an imperial federationist, was sent by the government to make a report on the grape growing districts of the west. He did so and found out, so we are told, that if they would grow a better grape they could make wine, if bottled, to be equal, or nearly so, to the article which was to be imported from France. One might have thought that such a report as this would have the effect of satisfying those in the grape-growing business. It, however, has not done so, and they have, therefore thrown nearly all their grapes on the market instead of making wine. The remainder in many places have been used as manure for the fields. So that another blessing in disguise has been thoroughly exploded.

The story about Mr. Angers' remedy for the low price of wheat is so rich that it should be repeated daily. It is so concise, namely, "Go into mixed farming."

This royally-royal commission which is to be appointed to take evidence as to the effects of the overflowing of the Fraser river will no doubt report, if ever it does report, that it is really, although the farmers do not see it that way, a blessing in disguise. Evidence taken on the banks of the Nile will show this. About fourteen or fifteen years ago a commission was appointed to report on the Trent Valley canal. The report has never yet been published. Five or six years ago Sir John Macdonald explained that the chairman and some of the commissioners had died, but that they had submitted an interim report of some kind. In 1891 a prohibition commission was appointed. It has been used as a sort of adjunct to the distillers' commission, of which Louis P. Kribs was the head, and which sat alongside the so-called prohibition commission. In this city they called everybody in favor of the liquor trade, but refused to summons those who were not. For instance, they refused to call Mr. Foster—not that I mean to say that he is a prohibitionist, but he did give the cause support in "a moment of weakness."

Well, this commission has already cost the country a terrible amount of money, but no one will ever be benefited by it. Whenever the question of prohibition comes up in the house the government and their supporters howl amid shouts of laughter to wait until the prohibition commission reports. So it may be with the Fraser river commission.

The high freight rates on the Canadian Pacific railway are a great grievance to the people of Manitoba and the Northwest. "We will appoint a commission," said Mr. Haggart last session. The commission has been appointed, but it consists of government officials, and its inquiry will not be likely to have any results before the Thompson government is deprived of its lease of power. Not until then will the real evils from which the settlers are being affected disappear. The abolition of high protection will do much to aid the people of the Northwest and all sections of the Dominion. High freight rates and such questions can then be easily grappled with by a competent administration.

I have not heard the postmaster-general say so, but he evidently believes that the discontinuance of the $10 per month from the letter carriers and third class clerks in Victoria is a blessing in disguise. The clerks, for instance, will be forced to study economy, thereby showing that they can live even in British Columbia, under high protection, at $30 per month. This will help to boom immigration. As long as the salary of the postmaster and the indemnity and mileage of the members have not been touched the majority which blindly and slavishly answer the crack of the Tory whip in parliament will not be lessened. At any rate so says

SLABTOWN.

READING.

An Extract From an Unpublished Lecture by Lowell.

One is sometimes asked by young men to recommend to them a course of reading. My advice would always be to confine yourself to the supreme books in literature; still better, to choose some great author and grow thoroughly familiar with him. For, as all roads lead to Rome, so they all likewise lead thence, and you will find that, in order to understand perfectly and weigh exactly any really vital piece of literature, you will be gradually and pleasantly persuaded to studies and explorations of which you little dreamed when you began, and you will find yourselves scholars before you are aware. If I may be allowed a personal illustration, it is my own profound admiration for the "Divina Commedia" of Dante that lured me into what little learning I possess. For remember that there is nothing less fruitful than scholarship for the sake of mere scholarship, nor anything more wearisome in the attainment. But the moment you have an object and a centre your attention is quickened, and attention is the mother of memory; whatever you acquire groups and arranges itself in an order which is lucid because it is everywhere in intelligent relation to an object of constant and growing interest. Thus, as respects Dante, I asked myself, What are his points of likeness or unlikeness with the authors of classical antiquity? In how far is either of these an advantage or a defect? What and how much modern literature has preceded him? How much was he indebted to it? How far had the Italian language been subdued and applied to the uses of poetry or prose before his time? How much did he color the style or thought of the authors who followed him? Is it a fault or a merit that he is so thoroughly impregnated with the opinions, passions, and even prejudices not only of his age but of his country. Was he right or was he wrong in try. Was he right or wrong in being a Ghibbeline? To what extent is a certain freedom of opinion which he shows sometimes on points of religious doctrine to be attributed to the humanizing influence of the Crusaders in enlarging the horizon of the western mind by bringing it into contact with other races, religions and social arrangements? These and a hundred other such questions were constant stimulants to thought and inquiry, stimulants such as no merely objectless, and, so to speak, impersonal study could have supplied.—Library Journal.

PROFESSOR CHARLES FAUVEL, M.D.

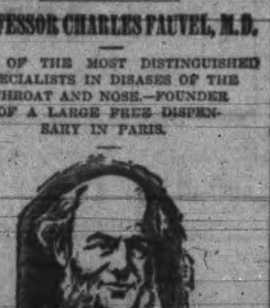
ONE OF THE MOST DISTINGUISHED SPECIALISTS IN DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND NOSE.—FOUNDER OF A LARGE FREE DISPENSARY IN PARIS.



Professor Fauvel was born in 1830, at Amiens, and now resides in Paris. For his high attainments in his profession he has received almost every mark of distinction that could be conferred upon him by his country or his confreres in medicine. These are his words, 'Of all the tonics, none equal "Vin Mariani.' I use it personally and for my family, and have prescribed it for more than twenty years with unvarying satisfaction to myself and patients.' Vin Mariani is the only tonic-stimulant without any unpleasant reaction and which may be taken indefinitely. If you are tired, weak, nervous, irritable, if you feel a want of energy and have not a good appetite, just try 'Vin Mariani.' Surely a remedy recommended by thousands of eminent people the world over is worth a single trial. Send stamp to Lawrence A. Wilson & Co., Montreal, the Canadian agents, and receive, gratis, a beautiful little album containing the photographs of many celebrities who have testified to the excellence of 'Vin Mariani.'

STEAM AND SPEED.

Some Hints from a Builder of Very Fast Vessels.

Mr. J. A. Normand, of Havre, is one of the most successful torpedo boat builders in the world. At the meeting of the institute of Naval Architects of Great Britain he contributed a paper that has attracted special attention, as the subject was the "Importance of Economy of Fuel in Very Fast Vessels, and the Advantages to be Derived from Heating the Feed Water." One of the London journals devoted to ship building says of Monsieur Normand:

"He has for many years devoted his skill and energy to perfecting torpedo boats, and the wonderful results he has obtained in speed, but more especially in the economical consumption of coal, has been a matter of surprise to the builders of such vessels. Mr. Thornycroft, who was present at the meeting, did not fail to show his appreciation. The secret of his success is in heating the feed water; and to do this he has contrived a special valve by which steam is taken in compound engines at mid stroke from the low pressure cylinder, and in triple and quadruple engines direct from the low pressure casings, all the work previously given up in the engine being a direct gain. Monsieur Normand, by his method of heating the feed has obtained great economy in fuel, so much so that at 25 knots the consumption is not more than two pounds per indicated horsepower per hour, which is about two-thirds that of similar craft built in this country. M. Normand has also reduced the total weight of boilers and machinery to about 48 pounds per maximum indicated horsepower, and in a vessel now building this will be still further reduced. The gist of the paper is that whereas some engineers dispense with steam jackets, feed heaters, etc., in order to lessen the weight of machinery, M. Normand utilizes these contrivances to increase the temperature of the feed. He thus saves in fuel much more than the extra weight due to steam jackets, etc., can do with fewer boilers, has an all round saving, and utilizes to the fullest extent the advantages which can be obtained by such contrivances."

GENERAL DEBILITY.

How to Secure Release from the Distressing Symptoms that Follow in the train of a "Run Down" System.

The expression general debility is frequently made use of in referring to those who are weakly or whose system is run down, and it covers a multitude of symptoms that either singly or in the aggregate make life miserable, and hurry the victim to an early grave unless prompt and efficient means are taken to restore exhausted nature by building up the blood and assisting it to absorb pure oxygen, that great sustainer of all organic life. As a blood builder and nerve restorer Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People surpass all other remedies known to science. Their action is speedy and certain, building up the shattered system and driving out disease. Miss Olive E. Orde, Greywood, N. S., bears testimony to the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. She says: "When I began using Pink Pills my whole system was run down to the extent that I was unable to do any house work. My appetite was poor, I had almost constant severe headaches, dizziness and other distressing symptoms, and my friends feared I was going into a decline. I soon began to recover under the influence of your wonderful medicine, and am now as well as ever I was and feel that I owe my present good health to Pink Pills, which I cheerfully recommend to others who may be suffering as I was." If you are suffering from any of the troubles due to watery or poor blood, or shattered nerves, do not waste precious time, or your money, in experiments with other medicines—procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once, and you will speedily be restored to full health and strength. Sold by all dealers or sent post paid at 5 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. Avoid imitations and substitutes.

CHARGES WERE REFUTED.

Engineer Mohun's Charges of Defective Work Upon the Sewers Answered

At Council Meeting—Fire Alarm System Declared Bad by Chief Deasy.

The city council met in regular session last night. The sitting was a short one, the business being of minor importance. Ald. Munn, in the absence of Mayor Teague, took the chair.

H. L. Salmon complained of the nuisance of the expressmen opposite his premises. Referred to chief of police.

The sewerage commisisoners wrote regarding the allegation of Engineer Mohun that defective material was used in the present sewers. Mr. Mohun complained that lead joints were being supplied and that orick was employed in the manholes instead of concrete, and that the brick was bad in many instances. The report stated that the conditions of the contract were being complied with and letters were enclosed from Engineer Wilmot.

Ald. Styles wanted the affair referred to the sewerage committee.

Ald. Vigelius did not see the advantage. The city engineer had reported adversely against the charges, and the council looked to him.

Ald. Dwyer said Mr. Mohun approved of Stanford joints instead of the cement joints. The complaint of brick being bad had been denied.

Ald. Baker said Engineer Mohun was a sorehead.

Ald. Dwyer—"That's so."

Ald. Baker continued, saying the joints and bricks were better than those used when Mohun was in charge.

Chief Deasy complained of the defective fire alarm system. He advocated that a proper electrician be at once placed in charge. Referred to fire wardens.

The finance committee reported accounts totalling $3000.

The electric light committee recommended that tenders be called for supplies enumerated.

A letter was received from A. L. Belyea, lawyer, claiming a month's salary for Mr. Raffuse, electric light trimmer, who was laid off without notice. Received.

The street committee recommended that the repairs to the sidewalk on Catherine street be done and that Mary street be made passable by the blasting of rock and that the fence be moved back on the old Esquimalt road. A letter was enclosed from the city barristers giving the legal opinion that since the fence was put up before that portion of the city was incorporated the council had no legal redress. Adopted.

Acting Mayor Munn stated that the contractor for electric light poles had concluded the contract, but more holes had to be dug. There had been complaint that the contractor was getting more than his fair share of work. The earth holes cost $1 each.

The council expressed the opinion that the earth holes be given to men who would do them for $1 each, the rock holes to be still done by the contractor.

Ald. Ledingham said a new cities act was required to give the council proper powers, and since the legislature was in session now was the time to take action.

Ald. Styles said it would cose $1000.

Ald. Ledingham replied that the extra powers were urgently required, no matter what the cost.

Ald. Dwyer referred to the dangerous condition of Fernwood road, occasioned by the bad fixing of a fence.

Ald. Ledingham wanted a meeting called for Friday night to consider the municipalities act.

Ald. Harris thought the council should wait the action of the local government. In the speech from the throne it was mentioned that the government intended to introduce a measure permitting the government of cities by commissioners.

It was decided to hold a special meeting on Friday afternoon.

PLUMPER PASS NEWS.

The Music of the Fog Horn—Fishing—Boring for Coal.

Plumper Pass, Nov. 10.—Mr. Harry Clapham went to Victoria on the 7th instant with his second consignment of hogs. He is expected to return on the 11th with his young bride, when the islanders will congregate on the wharf to give them a hearty welcome.

The residence of Mr. Charles Groth was partially destroyed by fire on the 7th instant.

Fogs have been very prevalent in this locality for the past week. But for the musical strains of the fog horn on Point Comfort shipping would have had great difficulty in finding the mouth of the pass. The steamship Quadra anchored in Miner's Cove on the night of the 9th instant owing to the fog.

Large money is now being made at dog fishing. Herring are reported scarce.

Mr. J. T. Seabrook was a passenger from this place to Victoria on the steamer Charmer on the 9th instant.

A steam launch has been purchased by a Saturna capitalist, for the purpose of plying between the Islands.

The diamond drill which has been in operation on Mayne Island, is to be removed to Pender Island, it being thought that coal will there be found at no great depth.

A meeting of the Plumper Pass Rifle Association is called for the 24th of November, for the purpose of discussing the advisability of winding up its affairs. A shooting match will take place after the meeting.

Mr. Herbert Machlin met with a narrow escape of his life owing to the fog. He in company with Mr. J. T. Seabrook was making an exploration of Galiano island on horseback. Darkness and fog overtook them on their return journey, and missing the trail Mr. Machlin's steed stumbled over a fog, his clothes caught in the pommel of the saddle, and he was dragged along the ground for some distance. His companion, having noticed the accident, as is his wont, acted the Good Samaritan. A very unpleasant night having been spent in the woods, the gay cavaliers returned home not much the worse for their experience.

ENGLISHMAN'S RIVER.

Interesting Budget of News of This Farming Settlement.

Englishmans' River, November 9.—A concert was given in the Parksville school house on Wednesday. Rev. C. E. Cooper took the chair and a very pleasant evening was spent, the programme being varied with comic songs, recitations, quartettes and instrumental music. There was a large attendance of the settlers. It is to be hoped that it is only the first of a series of such enjoyable evenings.

The popular young Englishman, Will Cheney, left to-day for the "Old Sod," and his many friends wish him bon voyage and good luck. During the six years he has been in the settlement he has made a host of friends, and all regret to lose such a desirable settler. It is not generally known, but Will was one of the best long-distance runners in the Midland Counties in his day; his best for the half mile was 1.58 1-2 and the one mile, 4.22. He was also a steeplechase jockey of considerable repute, and his cousin, Jack Cheney, at the present day is about the leading jockey across country.

G. Byshaw had his house-raising yesterday and there was a great gathering of the "Clans."

MOTHER!

Lactated Food Will Make Your Baby Bright, Strong and Happy.

Why is your darling baby so weak and puny, so cross and peevish? You say you cannot tell why, and you know of no good reason why it could be so. Let us, in a few words, tell you where the trouble arises. Your baby, dear mother, is not receiving a perfect, pure and nourishing food; its digestion is imperfect, its stomach is weak, and it cannot rest and sleep well.

If you were feeding your treasure daily on pure Lactated Food, what a wondrous change you would see in baby. No ill-tempered babies exist where Lactated food is used; no peevishness is observed, no crying for hours at a time, when nature's true food is regularly used from day to day.

There is danger, dear mother, if you neglect to use the only food fitted for infantile nourishment. If you are not fully convinced about the superiority of Lactated Food, get your physician's opinion at once; he knows that the great food is a wonderful life-saver.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

The Events of the Day Among Amateurs and Professionals.

THE RING.

McAULIFFE AND GRIFFO.

New York, Nov. 12.—Jack McAuliffe is of the opinion that he can defeat young Griffo, and wants a chance to show the public that he can do so. McAuliffe and Eddie Stoddart, his manager, tried to find Griffo on Saturday night. The Australian promised to meet McAuliffe at the Coleman house early in the evening, but failed to come to time. McAuliffe said to a reporter yesterday:

"I am confident that I can whip Griffo, and want the chance. I will fight him to a finish or in a limited round contest before any club in America or England. I will fight him at New Orleans, give him $2300 and then guarantee a $3000 purse. I think that is liberal. Hereafter I will take good care of myself, and after my battle with Zeigler will be ready to tackle either Leeds, Abbott, Bowen or Arthur Valentine of England."

A Racking Cough

Cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Mrs. P. D. HALL, 217 Genessee St., Lockport, N. Y., says:

"Over thirty years ago, I remember hearing my father describe the wonderful curative effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During a recent attack of La Grippe, which assumed the form of a catarrh, soreness of the lungs, accompanied by an aggravating cough, I used various remedies and prescriptions. While some of these medicines partially alleviated the coughing during the day, none of them afforded me any relief from that spasmodic action of the lungs which would seize me the moment I attempted to lie down at night. After ten or twelve such nights, I was

Nearly In Despair,

and had about decided to sit up all night in my easy chair, and procure what sleep I could in that way. It then occurred to me that I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took a spoonful of this preparation in a little water, and was able to lie down without coughing. In a few moments, I fell asleep, and awoke in the morning greatly refreshed and feeling much better. I took a teaspoonful of the Pectoral every night for a week, then gradually decreased the dose, and in two weeks my cough was cured."

THE YUKON COUNTRY.

Provisions Getting Rather Scarce Among the Miners.

There are about 1800 people in the Yukon river basin, counting miners, missionaries and traders. Of these there are nine white ladies and several children, says the Juneau News.

The provisions are scarce at the two trading companies stores. There are about 6500 sacks of flour for 1800 men, and the miners figure a sack per month to the man for ten months, which leaves a shortage of 2500 sacks. If this can be taken as a standard of the amount of provisions on hand, some suffering must necessarily follow, as the Indians have learned to depend upon the traders for part of their winter's supply, and have not put up their usual supply of salmon, which will thus bring about a scarcity of food for them, as the whites always have the first show at the provisions. Captain Healey's company, the North American Trading and Transportation Company, carry about 4500 sacks of the aforesaid flour stored in large warehouses at Fort Cudahy, about three-quarters of a mile below Forty Mile Post. This company has cut the price in provisions and supplies in two and has no intention of raising the same this winter, in spite of the fact that supplies will run short. In consequence restaurant board has been reduced to $12 a week, and this reduction makes it possible for men to work mines with a profit which would not pay to work in previous seasons. Captain Healy intends to more than double his shipment of supplies into the Yukon country next year, and expects to put another steamer on the Yukon river next year. The present steamer now owned by the company, plying between Pelly River and St. Michaels, is over two hundred feet in length, carrying a crew of between 40 and 50 men, including Indians for loading on wood.

There were a number of "tourist" miners going into the country this year who had no experience in mining and refused to work at Forty Mile at $6 a day. There were others who had no money, and the two companies could not afford to give them credit, because they could sell their supplies to others for cash.

There were about 150 people who came out of the country this year, some of them having struck it rich and were headed for their homes. The steamer Bertha, which was scheduled to leave St. Michaels for San Francisco on September 20, must have taken out upwards of $200,000 in gold dust. Nearly all of the old miners did well this year, and many of the new comers were also fortunate.

I believe that before the end of three years the trip can be made from Forty Mile Post to Juneau in seven or eight days. To do this it will require a good trail and a station of steamers on the lakes and the headquarters of the Yukon river. I have information which leads me to believe that next season a mail route will be established, giving three or four mails to the interior points. The time has passed when the cost of transportatoin of outfits over the summit is $15 per 100 pounds, as next year I look for goods to be transported at a cost of not to exceed $5 per hundred pounds.

I would advise any person going in next spring to take in supplies sufficient to last him until at least August 1.

OLD MEN'S HOME INQUIRY

Charges Made Against Caretaker Sutherland of Cruelty to Inmates.

Alleged Practices of Favoritism and Appropriation of General Supplies.

The old men's home investigation is in progress at the home. The board of aldermen are the court of investigators. They drove out in hacks this morning from the city hall, and it was nearly 11 o'clock when they arrived at the home. The old men were loitering about the yard and eagerly welcomed the aldermen. Caretaker Sutherland was on hand.

The question was first asked how the investigation was to be held.

Ald. Vigelius wished the caretaker to withdraw. The inmates were afraid on several former occasions to say anything in the presence of the caretaker.

Mayor Teague said they could not commence like that. This was a court of law to a certain extent, and the accused should be given a chance to hear the charge against him.

Ald. Dwyer favored the caretaker withdrawing, and was supported by Ald. Ledingham.

Mayor Teague thought it better to take evidence on oath.

Ald. Styles moved that the caretaker be requested to leave the room.

Mr. Sutherland rose—"Mr. Mayor, won't you allow me to say something—"

Mayor Teague replied the object of the council was to do justice; the caretaker had nothing to say in the matter.

Mr. Sutherland said it was the most extraordinary thing he had ever heard of.

A vote was at last taken, and resulted in six being in favor of the caretaker withdrawing and two otherwise.

Mr. Sutherland then withdrew, again saying as he went out that the proceedings were most extraordinary.

Mayor Teague then took the chair, a Bible was obtained that looked the worse for wear and the first witness was called.

John Connor said he had no complaint to make; he was well housed and fed and had nothing to say against the caretaker. He had been here a year.

Ald. Styles wanted to know did the old men work and help the caretaker in his duties.

Witness replied that he had cut up wood; had often swept out his own room, made his own bed and washed dishes. Every man made his own bed.

It was decided to call in the caretaker after each witness had been examined.

Caretaker Sutherland was then called. He had nothing to object to in the evidence of the last witness.

Richard Copeland said he had complaints against the caretaker.

Mayor Teague asked were the complaints in writing.

Ald. Wilson did not see why the complaints should be submitted in writing. Many of the old men could not write; they were old and decrepit. The simplest plan was to take the evidence without any formal charges in writing.

Mr. Copeland charged that the caretaker appropriated clothes that did not belong to him. Sutherland took them to his home. The clothes were sent in for the old men. He was too cruel.

Ald. Harris asked what was the cruelty.

Copeland stated that Sutherland had choked Dooley on the floor and pulled him off the sofa. Sutherland once shook his fist in the face of a man named Morrison.

Ald. Styles asked if Sutherland had worn a suit of clothes sent to the old men.

Copeland replied that the clothes were sent in to the home. Campbell, the druggist, sent in the bundle of clothes. Three pair of blankets, a white spread, a trunk and other things in the line of wearing apparel were taken away from him. They were left him by a man named Simpson, who died here. Sutherland had his eye on the white spread directly he saw it.

Ald. Vigelius asked if he ever ordered the caretaker out of his room.

Copeland replied that he had not. He said the caretaker had taken ten chickens to town that belonged to the home.

Ald. Styles asked about a bedridden man named Halfpenny.

Copeland replied that he knew the bed of the sick man had not been made days together and that clean linen was seldom put on. He would like a search warrant for the caretaker's house; he could find out where the things went. Sutherland had come to the old men's home to make all he could. An old arm chair had disappeared that was presented to the home.

Ald. Munn asked did witness obey the rules of the home.

Copeland replied that he had done so and that the caretaker had not.

Ald. Wilson asked was there extravagance.

Copeland replied that the council could see by the grocery bills.

Ald. Vigelius objected to such evidence; the bills were in the city hall.

Ald. Dwyer asked did he not obey the commands of the caretaker when it suited him.

Copeland replied that Sutherland said he paid attention to no one but Ald. Munn; not even to Mayor Teague. He asked that a man be put over the house of Sutherland before they had a chance to remove them; it might be too late if they hesitated.

Ald. Styles said the question of groceries was a proper one.

Ald. Wilson asked did the caretaker keep any boarders at the city's expense.

"Lots of them," replied the witness. They kept them for a week at a time and once had two organs going; one was not enough.

Ald. Humphrey—"Plenty of music."

Ald. Styles—Did the friends take their meals and sleep here?

Copeland replied in the affirmative. The caretaker had men who were inmates of the home who kept a watch out for the caretaker to see the road was clear. The names of the inmates were Mills and Larmer. These men told Sutherland everything that went on. The horse that belonged to the caretaker was fed on bread and oatmeal (laughter) and had only one bale of hay for the month.

Ald. Humphrey asked did he not transfer property to his daughter before coming to the home.

Copeland replied there was a transfer, but there was also a mortgage of $2500 on the property. His daughter could not keep him. The food was badly cooked. One day's food was warmed for the next day. The soup was very thin and blue. The second day of cooking was better than the first. The supplies and groceries were taken away when the bell rang for the inmates to go to dinner.

The evidence was then read to Sutherland, who was called in. Sutherland denied that he ever took clothes for himself. He had handled Dooley, but not rougher than necessary. Dooley was drunk. The affair had been investigated in the courts. In the case of Creagan Sutherland said that Creagan had lost his faculties; he was a man of 97 years of age and had often run away from the home; subsequently he laid on the floor at night, refusing to go to bed. He denied that he had taken any arm chairs to his home.

Ald. Humphrey asked did he ever take a chair to his home.

Sutherland replied that he had taken a chair over to mend it.

Ald. Styles asked about the charge of cruelty.

Sutherland said he was not cruel to the inmates.

Ald. Baker asked witness if he ever wore clothes presented to the old men's home.

Sutherland replied that it was humiliating to acknowledge it; he did wear a pair of pants belonging to the home to go to town one day.

Ald. Baker asked about the bed spread and blankets.

Sutherland did not know where they were; they were in the home.

Ald. Munn asked about the chickens.

Sutherland said he had exchanged the pullets for others.

Ald. Munn questioned regarding Halfpenny.

Sutherland swore that Halfpenny's bed was made every day; his meals were brought to him and every care and attention was given him.

Ald. Munn asked did he say to Copeland that he would obey no one but him.

Witness denied this.

Ald. Baker queried about grease taken away from the home.

Sutherland replied that he had exchanged grease for electric soap.

Ald. Styles asked about the charge that he kept boarders at the city's expense.

Sutherland replied that his brother and sister had once stayed with him for a few meals. His sister stayed for a week. He also denied that he had fed his horse with bread and oatmeal belonging to the city.

Mayor Teague questioned about the boiling and cooking of food.

Sutherland alleged that food was good but that the men were hard to please.

James McFadden swore that Sutherland had twice kept him without medicine although he had suffered terribly and flashes of fire were before his eyes; he thought he would strangle, yet Sutherland would not get him the medicine. He told the doctor and the doctor told him to tell Mayor Teague. He supported the evidence of Copeland in regard to the ill-treatment of the bed-ridden inmate. Sutherland had knocked down Creagan on his face and fell on top of him; he had seen it himself. An arm-chair presented by an old lady was taken away by Mrs. Sutherland, who said it was too good for the inmates; they would break it. He had been supplied with a mattress with a hole in it, notwithstanding that Ald. Styles had ordered a new mattress. When an item appeared in the papers that an investigation was going to be held, a good mattress was given him. Sutherland had sold chickens belonging to the home and had received none in return. The food was badly cooked; the inmates got water for soup.

Ald. Harris asked about the suit of clothes.

McFadden said that Sutherland had gone into Campbell's store with a black suit of clothes given to the inmates of the home. The clerk in Campbell's drug store would bear him out. Mr. Pooley had bought him underwear. He had put it in the wash and had never since seen them. Sutherland had a preference for certain inmates who carried stories to him. Witness had once been nine weeks without change of apparel, and when he asked for his warm woolens the caretaker told him to go "plumb to the devil." Sutherland last Christmas had eight or nine persons at his home feasting. The noise was more like a tavern than a respectable private house. He made his own bed, cleaned the knives and forks. He was willing to do all the work he could.

Ald. Munn asked was there anything else.

McFadden said that a quantity of provisions and cake left over after a Methodist entertainment given at the home was taken by Sutherland to his own home and the old men never saw anthing more of it. Not a single morsel was given to the poor men who were in bed. He believed that the caretaker had been stealing ever since he had been in charge. McFadden said that if the house of Sutherland and that of his brother were searched articles would be found. The socks were darned by an old inmate, the clothes were washed, the tables were set, the dishes washed, and the general work done by inmates. Sutherland was a lazy man. When everything was ready for breakfast an inmate called Sutherland. Mrs. Sutherland did not put in an appearance till after 10 o'clock, and the old men helped her to get dinner. Although they had chickens at the home the inmates had never seen an egg for six weeks.

Ald. Munn asked did he go into a store and tell a merchant that Sutherland was a thief.

Witness did not remember. The alderman could bring in the merchant.

Ald. Wilson asked did he notice the theft of the groceries.

McFadden believed that there was no economy in groceries; he did not think all the groceries brought in were used.

The members of the board began to feel hungry, and it did not take long to decide to stay for dinner. Since the caretaker had not been told beforehand, the dinner would be an indication as to how the old men fared. The aldermen and the newspaper men filed into the dining room, when the following bill of fare were presented for discussion. Caretaker Sutherland said it was the same as supplied to the men.

Vegetable soup.
Boiled Meat.
Potatoes (boiled with jackets).
Tea, bread and butter, tomato chow chow.

The soup was good, but a little thin and rather greasy. The beef was tender and well cooked and did not require much mastication. The potatoes were cooked well, but an occasional one might be found that was not well done. They had been boiled with their jackets on. The bread could hardly be better, and the butter was certainly as good, if not better than that used in many city restaurants. The tea was not quite palatable to a man who had cultivated a taste for a good cup of tea, but it could not be said to be bad.

It was suggested by an alderman that perhaps the meat might be chopped up for the old men, as many of them were nearly toothless. The general impression was that the food was good.

After luncheon Gabriel Mills gave evidence that he was well treated. There was no better woman than Mrs. Sutherland. No cruelty was practiced. He believed McFadden and Copeland were the cause of all the trouble.

The investigation will last for some time.
